Early Intervention Vision and Hearing

Early Intervention of vision and hearing is important for learning and proper development of speech and language. Treatment outcomes are much more successful the earlier a problem is detected. Hearing testing is done through Otoacoustic Emissions (OAE). The units screen the hair cells in the middle ear through a soft tone presented through a probe placed in the ear canal. A small microphone in the probe measures the echo that is returned from the ear. The echo is analyzed to determine how well the inner ear is working. Vision testing is done using the Welch Allyn® SureSight, provides objective screening results in under 30 seconds, screening the whole lens at once from 14 inches away. The unit automatically measures and indicates abnormal readings.
